WELCOME TO COPENHAGEN

Dear guest,

We welcome you to Copenhagen.

When Summer turns to Fall, Copenhagen changes its colors from green and blue to all kinds of red and orange. The sun-filled days are great for walks around the city and trips out in the neighbouring areas and cities, while the colder days call for exploring the city's world-class museums and ever-booming Nordic culinary scene.

In this edition of CURATOR you will find experiences for the urban explorer, for the art aficionado and for the entire family. Dive into Copenhagen's diverse art scene with museum director Mikkel Bogh from SMK – Statens Museum for Kunst (The National Gallery of Denmark), or go north to the string of picturesque old fishermen's villages on the North coast. We also guide you to extraordinary culinary experiences and encourage you to go out searching for signs of one of Denmark's most well-known kings, King Christian IV.

CURATOR is your guide to explore the many attractions and museums in and around the capital of Denmark. We strive to provide you with inside knowledge on what to see and where to go, as we guide you to top art exhibitions, the best restaurants, royal treasures, green oasis' and the most exquisite museums of the city.

We wish you a wonderful stay!

The king who marked our city

King Christian IV (1577-1648) is crowned as king of Denmark and Norway as just nineteen years old after his father King Frederik II. He was a beloved and colourful monarch, who still lives within the historical awareness of the Danish people. Today we remember Christian IV as an avid warlord and an ambitious builder. If you wander around the streets of Copenhagen, you will definitely pass some of Denmark's most iconic buildings, built by King Christian IV.

Frederiksborg Castle.

The king brags with magnificent buildings

Christian IV reigns in the period from 1588 to 1648. In his first years as king, he travels around the world by sea. His travels lead him to the magnificent castles in both England and Italy, which inspires him to build some of the most iconic buildings in Denmark, still standing to this present day. Both Børsen (The Old Stock Exchange), Holmens Kirke (Holmen's Church) and the 41,55-meter-high Rundetårn (The Round Tower) raises in the centre of Copenhagen and are all decorated with the king's monogram. In 1606 the king initiated the construction of Rosenborg Castle. The castle is known by its high towers and red coloured brick work, which characterize many of Christian IV's buildings. Today, you can visit the castle yourself, as it is made into a museum. It is just a five-minute walk from Nørreport station. (www.kongernessamling.dk)

A new neighborhood in Copenhagen

Buildings and castles are not enough for the ambitious renaissance-king. In 1617 Christian IV begins the construction of a new neighbourhood in Copenhagen, called Christianshavn. The neighbourhood was first thought as the home for Dutch immigrants, who were invited to Denmark to help the Danes become better farmers. But the area quickly turned into a garrison or boatman's village and ended up becoming a regular grocery and craft town. It was built in the years after 1618 by the Dutch engineer and architect Johan Semp and connected to Copenhagen by the bridge Knippelsbro. Today Christianshavn is an attractive neighbourhood where historic buildings meet Copenhagen's modern Michelin-restaurants, cultural events and museums. If you are looking for long walks along the water, Christianshavn's Canal is the place! On the way you can visit The North Atlantic House, a cultural centre offering insight into art and culture from Iceland, Greenland and the Faroe Islands. (www.nordatlantens.dk)

Frederiksborg Castle and the Baroque Garden

Take the train to Hillerød Station north of Copenhagen, and you'll find a true renaissance-gem: a castle built by Christian IV in the early decades of the 17th century. In 1560 King Frederik II constructed the first part of Frederiksborg Slot (Frederiksborg Castle). But between 1600 and 1620, his son, Christian IV demolished the castle, before building the renaissance castle we know today. In 1859 a major fire destroyed a large part of the interior and inner walls, which induced the royal family to no longer use the castle as a residence. And since 1878 Frederiksborg Castle has housed Nationalhistorisk Museum (The Museum of National History), which presents 500 years of Danish history with a collection of portraits, historical paintings, furniture and applied art. Walk through the many reconstructed rooms with authentically creaking floors and imagine how it must have been in the time of Christian IV. The museum also presents changing exhibitions featuring the history of the 20th and 21st centuries. Outside the castle you'll find a beautiful Baroque Garden with a view of the lake and the romantic surroundings – and just five minutes' walk from the castle you'll find Hillerød's charming shopping street. (www.dnm.dk)

A war museum for the belligerent king

In 1604 Christian IV's historic arsenal on Slotsholmen in the middle of Copenhagen is constructed. It consists of a harbour, an arms chamber, a provincial house with bakery and brewery and different kinds of workshops. The ships from the fleet can sail into the harbour and be loaded with gunpowder, guns and ropes. Christian IV also uses the arsenal to store his private collection of weapons. Today the arsenal is transformed into Krigsmuseet (The War Museum), where the audience can explore 500 years of Denmark's war history: from the famous battles against Sweden, England and Germany to today's international missions in Iraq, Afghanistan and Libya.

COPENHAGENERS RECOMMEND.

↑ Lisbeth, 56 and Else, 64:

“When we have visitors from other parts of the world, we always go for a walk in Christiania to watch all the self-built houses. Afterwards we walk by the Opera and maybe grab some food at a food marked on the way. Sometimes we visit Glyptoteket, which is an amazing place. If we go outside Copenhagen, we visit the museum Ordrupgaard in Charlottenborg, where you can see paintings made by the Danish painter Vilhelm Hammerhoi (Note: Ordrupgaard is closed in 2019, red.).”

⌚ Annelise, 62:

“There are many places in Copenhagen I would like to recommend. The National Gallery of Denmark (SMK), the National Museum of Denmark and Glyptoteket are all great museums to visit. There is also Israels Plads, where you can buy fresh commodity and taste all kinds of foods in Torvehallerne. Copenhagen also has some wonderful green oases such as The Kings Garden and Amaliehaven, where you can always find a lot of people hanging out. In the evening, you can go for a play in The Royal Danish Theatre. If you’re not familiar with the Danish language, you can always choose an opera.”

➲ Michelle, 24 and Klara, 25:

"If we go for a day-tour in Copenhagen, we will start at Vor Frelser Kirke (church) where you can get a view of Copenhagen's rooftops from the tower, and then we would walk through the Freetown Christiania all the way to Refshaleøen, not far away from inner city. On Refshaleøen we will go for a relaxing afternoon at the wellness centre Copenhot, sauna and spa. Here you can rent a boat with a Jacuzzi in it. Actually, Refshaleøen is a really nice place to go to if you have some spare hours to kill."

— CHRISTIAN

➲ Leon, 61:

"I'm interested in history, so I will recommend the area around Slotsholmen. Here you will find Christiansborg, the old brewery, the canals and The War Museum. All places with lots of history. You get a different perspective of the city, when you know what the buildings were used for back in the old days and who had their everyday life there. I also think Amalienborg and Amaliehaven are some amazing places. It's really easy to walk around and most places are free. If you are looking for something a little bit more festive, you can always enjoy a cold beer in Nyhavn."

Children in the city

Traveling as a family is wonderful and can create both fun experiences and long-lasting memories. However, sometimes the smallest guest might not find the museum exhibitions quite as interesting as their parents do. Hence, we offer you a guide to activities and museums in Copenhagen that are especially well tailored for bringing smaller children along.

Create your own art

SMK – Statens Museum for Kunst is the national gallery of Denmark and displays more than 700 years of art and art history, but the museum itself is anything but antiquated. Every weekend SMK opens the door to the biggest workshop for children in Copenhagen. Kids of all ages can create art with a great variety of different materials and even get help from the house artist. Furthermore, the museum also offers a drawing room where you can draw sculptures. You can also book a family guide and get a private tour where the guide will invite you to see, feel, touch and explore the museum together. (www.smk.dk)

Under water exploration

Den Blå Planet (The Blue Planet) is the biggest aquarium in Northern Europe. Here both big and small can explore the underwater world with everything from sharks to sea turtles and otters. And all of this is only a 12 minutes metro ride from the city centre.

The Blue Planet also has a great café called TANG where you can all enjoy your lunch with a spectacular view. The menu focuses of course on sea food but also offers many other choices. For example, do they have a whole children's menu. (www.denblaaplanet.dk)

Travel back in time

What did children do in the past to have fun? Did they even have toys to play with? At Arbejdermuseet (The Workers museum) you will be able to find answers to these questions and many more. The Workers museum is a culture-historical museum focusing on the labour movement and the trade unions. Here, children can try sorting bottles at a brewery, writing on a typewriter, dressings up in historical clothes and exploring an apartment from the 1930's. All while they are learning about the development of industrial work and the cultural heritage of the worker's movement.

Meet the pandas

Copenhagen Zoo is one of Europe's oldest of its kind. The Zoo is home to animals from all over the planet with more than 235 species. The biggest news of 2019 involve some very special guests from China: the two Giant Pandas Mao Sun and Xing Er. These two are a state gift from China to the Danish Queen and they arrived at the Zoo in April of 2019.

The Zoo also offers plenty of alternative ways to explore the animal kingdom. For example, you can get a close-up experience with the animals at the petting zoo. Here, children can get close to goats, ponies, pigs and cows.

Furthermore, a big safari playground is also provided for the youngest family members. Here, hours can be spent playing around and learning about nature with a great view of the real animals of the savanna. You can even walk into the old bear cave that has been transformed into a climbing paradise for children!

(www.zoo.dk)

Rain? – no problem

The City of Copenhagen offers some great playgrounds as well. One of these is Blegdamsremisen, an indoor playground, which means that the playground is open for fun no matter the weather. Through the opening hours a professional staff can help facilitate a variety of activities and games. All children in the ages 0-12 and their parents are very welcome to enjoy the playground. The main room is filled with all kinds of fun things to jump, run and play on. Besides the main room, Blegdamsremisen also feature a number of small workshops where the young ones can try working with clay, Lego or perhaps even wood burning.

The playground is usually open from 9am to 4.30pm, but from 9pm to 12.30 pm the playground is reserved for the 0-6 year olds. From 12.30 it is open for all ages. (www.kk.dk/artikel/den-indendoers-legeplads-blegdamsremisen)

Guide: Go North At the seaside

Several cities north of Copenhagen offers great museums and architecture for all ages. Take a daytrip to Helsingør (Elsinore), Dronningsmølle or Gilleleje and explore the hidden treasures close to fresh breezes of Øresund.

The lighthouse at M/S Maritime Museum of Denmark.

A museum for a maritime nation

Take the train from Copenhagen along the coastline to Helsingør Station (Elsinore Station) where you will find great places for the entire family. Start at the modern M/S Maritime Museum of Denmark, where beautiful architecture meets playful exhibitions. The museum is designed by the internationally renowned architects from BIG – Bjarke Ingels Group – and captures the feeling of being at sea with uneven floors and irregular angles. The museum offers a fascinating insight into the Danish role as a leading maritime nation through ages, focusing on both the major historical lines and the personal reports. Besides award-winning architecture, children can go for an adventure in "The Dreamship". Help the captain load the ship and keep the course. Climb all the way up to the bow and watch for sharks and sea creatures or relax in the sailor's hammock as you navigate the stars. The museum is free for all children under eighteen. (www.mfs.dk)

When you are ready to go ashore we recommend a short walk to Kronborg Slot (Kronborg Castle) just nearby.

Pet a crab – if you dare!

Elsinore is also the location of the fascinating Øresundsakvariet (The Øresund Aquarium). The aquarium is a part of the biological institute at Copenhagen University and a great opportunity to learn about the hidden creatures of the sea. Meet colorful fish, sharks, squids and giant lobsters and touch a starfish or pet a crab in one of the inside pools. Every day the staff feeds the big fish in front of an audience. In the fall you can join The Øresund Aquarium for a bird-safari to spot the many birds flying around Øresund.

Art in beautiful surroundings near Dronningmølle Station

In 1937-38 the Danish sculptor Rudolph Tegner (1873-1950) fulfilled his dream of building a museum for his works. The museum had to be in large dimensions as several of his works are enormous. Tegner was seen by many as extremely controversial and for some directly provocative in his expression. His artistic style was both grandiose and theatrical with inspiration from the classic antiquity. Despite the critique of his controversial sculptures, Tegner managed to produce some of today's greatest artwork and at this present day the museum still stands, open for artistic souls to walk among Tegner's many giant sculptures. After his death in 1950, Rudolph Tegner was buried under the floor of the museum's central hall. If you walk outside the museum, you'll find the sculpture park with a collection of Tegner's bronze sculptures placed in the wild landscape. Take the train from Helsingør Station to Dronningmølle Station in just 30 minutes.

The beautiful house of Munkeruphus.

A museum, a landscape and a view to Sweden

On a landscape ground close to the Oresund coast lies Munkeruphus, built in 1916 for civil engineer Frederik Raashou and his family by two young architects Terkel Hjejle and Niels Rosenkjær. Today Munkeruphus serves as an exhibition space with a café and a small gift- and bookshop run by Munkerup Trust. Besides changing exhibitions and events, Munkeruphus has a five acres garden with winding paths, great old trees, open lawns and beautiful views through a gully and down slopes to the beach. The view from the beach reveals the hills of Kullen in Sweden, the lighthouse at Nakkehoved and Hornbæk. If the weather allows it, you can walk along the beach from Dronningsmølle Station to Munkeruphus. It will take about 20-30 minutes.

Travel back in time in the local village

Take the train a little further to reach Gilleje. From the station, follow the main street to find a charming museum showing the life of the old Danish fishing village. Travel back in time and learn about the fishing life in the middle ages and the dangerous life at sea. Explore the history of Gilleje and walk though houses from the mid-1800 and authentic summer cottages from the 1950 and 1960. From April to October visitors can experience a special exhibition about the rescue of the Danish Jews in October 1943. Afterwards, you can enjoy a cake and a coffee in the garden or walk through the old parts of Gilleje and down the harbour.

"I have a son, Sebastian, who is one and a half years old and we like to spend time in the different parks of Copenhagen – especially Søndermarken in Frederiksberg. • Karin, 60 and Annette, 66:

"We eat our lunch almost every day on this spot next to Christianshavn's canal. We both live in the countryside but work in Copenhagen. If you enjoy the nature, our advice is to visit Bibliotekshaven at Søren Kierkegaards Plads between Christiansborg and the Royal Danish Library or go for a walk along Christianshavn's Canal with an amazing view across the water."

➲ Susanne and Gitte, 63:

“We would recommend a trip with kanalrundfarten (the harbour boats). Kanalrundfart is an open-air boat ride around the canals of Copenhagen. It’s lovely to see the city from the seaside, and it’s so easy to get around. We love Copenhagen and often visit the many museums here.” “One of my family members once told me to look up when you travel to a new city. I think that is good advice. Copenhagen is full of beautiful buildings and spectacular architecture and you will never experience its full beauty, if you only go shopping and never look up.”

“I work as an engineer, so I am very interested in architecture. For example, I think that the architecture at the aquarium Den Blå Planet in Kastrup is something you cannot find elsewhere. Otherwise a church such as Vor Frue Kirke is also a good example of interesting and beautiful architecture.”

Food craze in museum halls

Denmark has a passion for food. With Noma being titled the best restaurant in the world five times and with the term “New Nordic Cuisine” spreading like a wildfire, food clearly plays an important role in Danish culture today. This food fascination has also impacted the museum cafés and restaurants you will come across in Denmark. Here, we will guide you through some of the exciting food that you can experience when you are visiting the museums in and around Copenhagen.

(www.vikingeskibsmuseet.dk/besoeg/mad-og-drikke/cafeknarr/)

Dine with the Vikings

Vikingeskibsmuseet (The Viking Ship Museum) explores the relationship between the ancient human, the sea and the ships.

At the Viking Ship Museums café, Knarr, you can experience 'New Nordic Viking Food'. At Knarr you only use ingredients known by the Vikings. The food will make you travel back in time and not only meet the Vikings but also join their adventures to foreign lands and the food culture that they met there. All while your feet are firmly planted on the ground with a spectacular view over the see and the boatyard. Knarr offers breakfast and lunch every day – and brunch on the weekends.

The Viking Ship Museum is located in the city of Roskilde, a short train ride from Copenhagen Central Station. (www.vikingeskibsmuseet.dk/besoeg/mad-og-drikke/cafeknarr/)

Lunch on top of Copenhagen harbor

At DAC (the Danish Architecture Center) you can experience and learn about the world-famous Danish architecture. Besides being informative, DAC also holds a great café. Here, you are able to enjoy simple and elegant Nordic cuisine based on locale ingredients. DAC is placed in the heart of the harbour of Copenhagen, providing you a fantastic view of the water to one side and downtown Copenhagen to the other. If the weather allows, you are able to enjoy your food on the rooftop terrace and get even closer to the view! The café is open for lunch every day and for brunch in the weekends.

Idyllic get-away

Karen Blixen – or perhaps better known by her pseudonym Isak Dinesen – is one of Denmark's most famous writers. Her old home in Rungsted has been transformed into the museum Rungstedlund which houses a café in beautiful settings. The coffee shop offers a light lunch such as delicate smørrebrød (open-faced sandwich) during the week and brunch on Sundays.

Rungsted is a scenic town half an hour by train north of Copenhagen. The train travels along the seaside and gives you the opportunity to admire the coast of Oresund. (www.blixen.dk)

Philosophy and food

In the restaurant Søren K, named after Denmark's most famous philosopher Søren Kierkegaard, you can enjoy food amongst spectacular architecture. The restaurant is placed in the infamous building 'The Back Diamond' in which you also find The Royal Library of Denmark. Located right on the harbour of Copenhagen, the food is based on seasonal Scandinavian ingredients and can be enjoyed with a view of the sea. The restaurant is Enigma is a museum about communication set to open in 2020. Even though the museum technically is not open yet, it still hosts different pop-up exhibitions and events. And their café is most certainly already open. With lunch every day, brunch in the weekend and dinner on Thursdays the café, Cantina, offers great quality. Cantina has an innovative take on classical cooking and focuses on organic ingredients. With long tables and shareable food the café is encouraging people to speak with each other, which is very much in keeping with the whole idea behind the museum.

A dinner for conversations

Louisiana

From the colourful, sensuous dreamscapes of Pipilotti Rist to the visual shell shock of Lauren Greenfield's documentary photographs and the groundbreaking modernism of American painter and poet Marsden Hartley. These are the three must-see exhibitions of the season at the world-famous Louisiana Museum of Modern Art.

Marsden Hartley

Marsden Hartley (1877-1943) is "hailed as America's first great modern painter of the 20th century" and "one of the most intriguing art historical subjects of all time". Presenting 110 paintings, this exhibition marks the first major retrospective of his work in Europe in over 60 years.

48 Hours: Director's Cut

An underground exhibition space, lunch in The King's Garden and a visit to the Palm House. Copenhagen offers a huge variety of activities, no matter if you like contemporary exhibitions, exploring world history through art, or if you prefer hanging out in urban environments or green areas. Join Mikkel Bogh, the director of SMK, for 48 hours in Copenhagen exploring the city's diverse offerings of culture, green areas, urban culture and culinary highlights.

Mikkel Bogh

Mikkel Bogh (born 1963) is the director of SMK – Statens Museum for Kunst (The National Gallery of Denmark). SMK is The National Gallery of Denmark and it contains an important part of the nation's visual cultural heritage. Founded on the Danish kings' art collection, the museum houses multiple forms of expression that all bear witness to ideas, thoughts, and experiences of human beings from Western culture in the 1300s up until today.

DAY 1:

Kunsthal Charlottenborg and Apollo Bar

Start the day with a visit to Kunsthall Charlottenborg (Charlottenborg Exhibition Space) in the popular harbour area of Nyhavn. Kunsthall Charlottenborg is an extension to the old baroque castle Charlottenborg Castle, which since 1754 has also held the Royal Danish Academy of Fine Arts. In this historical setting one can experience both Danish and international contemporary art, and the large, beautiful rooms make it possible to display art on a large scale. It is by choice art which focuses on debate and current topics, and both the exhibitions and the architecture make this a place always worth visiting. After an art experience you can have a cup of coffee, a glass of wine or some light food in the sun at Charlottenborg Kunsthall's bar and eatery Apollo Bar. It is the renowned Danish chef, Frederik Bille Brahe, who is the man behind this spot – as well as SMK's café Kafeteria.

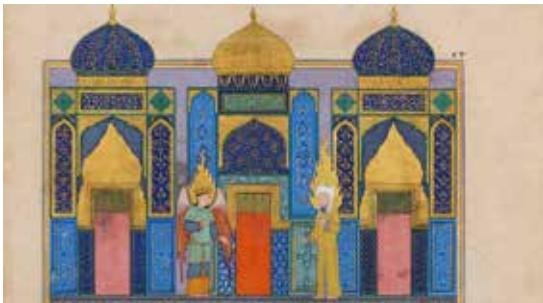

Fun Fact

Charlottenborg Kunsthall opened as an exhibition site in 1883 and was the first building in Copenhagen, dedicated to contemporary art. When Christiansborg Castle burned in 1884, a large part of the art, was saved from the flames. It was decided, that the art should be on public display at SMK, The National Gallery of Denmark. The art collection was firstly exhibited at Charlottenborg Kunsthall for over ten years, while the SMK building was under construction.

The David Collection

Continue your day in the center of Copenhagen. At David Collection you can experience one of the world's finest collections of Islamic art. The David Collection is a world-class museum filled with priceless art and cultural treasures; from 1000-year-old book manuscripts, textiles and Islamic works to recent photographs of the Islamic world. In addition, the museum also holds a fine collection of Danish art, including 14 works by the famous painter Vilhelm Hammershøi. Together, this is a unique combination – and the entrance is free.

Have lunch at Orangeriet

Across from the David Collection you will find one of the best lunch restaurants in town: the Orangery. The beautiful greenhouse building is on the edge of Kongens Have (The King's Garden), and while you enjoy the view of the fine Renaissance garden with perennial beds, old trees and sculptures, you can treat yourself to Danish smørrebrød of the absolute finest quality. The restaurant is also open during the evening, where they offer a variety of warm dishes.

The Botanical Garden

Experience a rare breathing space in the middle of the city and go for an afternoon tour of the Botanical Garden. The garden was built in 1874 on a piece of the city's old ramparts, and amidst these idyllic surroundings you will find Denmark's largest collection of living plants. The highlight of any visit to the garden is the Palm House, where subtropical and tropical plants grow, and butterflies flutter. Amazingly you step into another climate right in the middle of Copenhagen, and the glass construction of the house is incredibly beautiful both viewed from the inside as well as outside.

Torvehallerne

Before dinner, you can visit Torvehallerne at Israel's Square and enjoy a glass of wine or a small snack. In these lively halls you will find a diverse selection of Danish quality foods, butchers, fish-mongers, bakers and many more. A visit here gives a good sense of what a Danish market is. Torvehallerne is centrally located in Copenhagen, and from here you can easily stroll through the city and find a restaurant for dinner.

DAY 2:Søndermarken

Large wooden crowns, small pavilions and fine running trails in hilly terrain: Søndermarken is a park, easily overlooked, but nevertheless it is one of the city's finest of its kind. The romantic garden was built in the beginning of the 18th century in connection with Frederiksberg Castle – similar to Frederiksberg Garden, which is laid out on the other side of the castle. Start your day with a fresh run along the running tracks of Søndermarken or go for a quiet walk in its hilly landscape.

Cisternerne

Below Søndermarken's green lawns there is a 4320 m² large underground space, where drip stone hangs from the ceiling and a very special acoustic quality is formed. Cisternerne were originally an old water reservoir built in the 1850s, but today it serves as an exhibition space for ambitious contemporary artists. Selected artists are invited to make exhibitions specifically for this atmospheric space, and most often it is excellent art. At the moment, you can experience an exhibition by the Danish artist collective Superflex.

Istedgade and Kødbyen

Previously, Vesterbro Quarter around Istedgade was regarded the backside of town. It was a workers' neighborhood, and during the release of pornography in the 1960s, it became famous and simultaneously infamous. People from all over the world traveled to experience the many porn shops in the street. Today, most of the porn shops have disappeared and been replaced by small, funky restaurants and cafes, and the neighborhood is filled with young people. It is a nice place for a walk, where you can continue down Skydebanegade for lunch in Kødbyen, a former industrial area, which has been transformed into a lively and creative area with many bars, restaurants and galleries.

SMK – Statens Museum for Kunst (The National Gallery of Denmark)

Just half an hour walk from Kødbyen you will find The King's Garden and situated across from it: Denmark's national gallery, SMK – Statens Museum for Kunst. With more than 260,000 works, SMK's art collection is the largest in the country, and the museum offers a unique opportunity to experience contemporary art, modern art and old masters all under one roof. Especially the French and the Danish collections featuring works by, among others, Matisse and Købke are worth a visit. Purely architecturally, SMK is a unique spatial experience as well. The museum is an old historical building from 1889-1896 merged with a modernist extension with large glass sections from 1998. This combination is a nice contrast, but also effective connection between past and present. Besides the permanent collection, it is also possible at the moment to experience the largest exhibition so far on Danish Golden Age (1807-1864), which is one of the most beloved periods in Danish painting.

Lumskebugten

End the day with dinner at the cozy restaurant Lumskebugten at the end of the Esplanade at Nørre Toldbod. Here you can enjoy a sophisticated, tasty and solid meal inspired by old Danish food tradition. The place was established as a bar for seamen in 1854, when the harbor was a living industrial harbor, and was later transformed into a restaurant. Today, Lumskebugten is owned and run by the star chef Erwin Lauterbach, who has educated many of Copenhagen's young chefs and helped define the Danish gastronomic scene. After dinner you can round off the day with a nice walk along the water.

An oasis in the city

A collection of over 10,000 works of art including French Masterpieces, Egyptian mummies, ancient Roman sculptures and changing special exhibitions.

Start your visit to Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek with a great cup of coffee at the museum café Picnic, situated next to the tranquil winter garden. Then go on to explore the stunning building housing a collection of over 10,000 works of art including French Masterpieces, Egyptian mummies, ancient Roman sculptures and changing special exhibitions.

Experience the striking exhibition Pierre Bonnard. The Colour of Memory: For the first time in more than 25 years the vibrant works of French artist Pierre Bonnard (1867-1947) can be enjoyed in a solo exhibition in Denmark. In close collaboration with TATE Modern and Kunstforum Wien, The Glyptotek's summer exhibition stages more than 100 of the artist's works and is on until September 22.

If the weather permits, finish off your visit with a quiet moment on the rooftop terrace, taking in the panoramic views of Copenhagen and neighbouring amusement park, Tivoli. (www.glyptoteket.com)

Want to visit Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek? See page 47 for more info on location and opening hours.

24 Hours: Frederiksstaden

Frederiksstaden is one of the most beautiful and grandiose parts of Copenhagen. Named after King Frederik V, the construction of the area began while he reigned the county. Today most of the buildings are listed and few people reside in the area – instead it contains great museums and historic sites. Visit Frederiksstaden to experience the lavish architecture of the 1700's and 1800's as well as a diverse mix of Copenhagen's museums.

By Sigrid Kjær-Hansen

9.00 AM – The Union Kitchen

Kick off a busy day with a hearty breakfast at The Union Kitchen. The café offers a wide range of breakfast dishes from simpler servings as yoghurt with granola and avocado on toast to full-bodied dishes as breakfast burrito and their rightly popular Eggs Benedict.

10. AM – The royal home

In the heart of Frederiksstaden lies Amalienborg with its four (almost) identical palaces. The palaces were actually built for important noblemen. However, after the royal palace burnt to the ground in 1794 the Danish royal family assumed the buildings, which is where they continue to live. Today one of the palaces, Christian the VIII palace, contains a museum that recounts 150 years of royal family history. You can experience the private rooms of the previous kings and queens, which are kept as though they had just left; as well as getting a glimpse of how the royal family lives today.

Amalienborg is also where the current queen of Denmark lives – and when you are standing in the grandiose courtyard, you can even check to see if she is home! Look up! If the Danish flag is raised on top of the building, Queen Margrethe II is home. (www.kongernessamling.dk/amalienborg/)

11.30 AM – Medical history from classical era to modern research

Just around the corner from Amalienborg lies Medicinsk museion (The Medical Museum). It is a museum centered on medicine and medical science, ranging from the classical era to the most modern research.

The museum is located in the old surgical academy from 1787, which is evident when you move through the exhibitions. At the heart of the museum, you will find yourself at the anatomical theater where students used to perform autopsies and learn about the human anatomy. The collection consists of more than 250.000 items describing medicine and medical science's vast impact on our lives. (www.museion.ku.dk/da/)

12.30 PM – Outdoors and lunch

Are you looking for a quick bite? Then go for a Vietnamese bahn mi-sandwich from District Tonkin. Bring it outside and get yourself some fresh air. You could stroll through Amaliehaven (The Amalie Garden) situated right between Amalienborg and the harbour. The park is actually one of Copenhagen's youngest parks – it opened in 1983. The park offers a quiet break between beautiful plants, water art and one of Copenhagen's most stunning views. Further, along the harbor, you could also catch a Havnebus (harbour bus) and enjoy the scenic view of Frederiksstadens from the seaside. The bus travels through the inner harbor and allows you to see both the opera and many of Copenhagen's famous harbour bridges – and it is way cheaper than the canal tours.

(www.kongeligeslotte.dk/da/slotte-og-haver/amalienborg/amaliehaven.html, www.visitcopenhagen.dk/da/copenhagen/havnebussen-gdk447302 & www.idadavidsen.dk/)

14:30 PM – The Marble Church with a view

One of the most remarkable buildings in Frederiksstadens is Frederikskirken (Frederik's Church). Even though this is the actual name of the church, very few people know it as such. Instead the church is known by its most prominent feature – marble, hence The Marble Church.

The construction began in 1749 but it was not finished until 1894, making it a 145-year long building process. The circular nave is approximately 46 meters high and the dome has a diameter of 31 meters, making it among one of the largest of its kind in Europe.

Each Saturday and Sunday at 13.00, you can experience a guided tour to the church dome and get a fantastic view of Frederiksstadens as well as Copenhagen in general. However, there are only 30 spaces each day – so get there on time! (www.marmorkirken.dk/)

15.00 PM – 1200 years of art history

For a museum outside of the ordinary, head to Davids Samling (The David Collection). Located in a rather ordinary building across from The King's Garden, it doesn't brag, but do not be mistaken: the museum holds the greatest collection of Islamic art in the whole of Scandinavia, all the way from the 7th to the 19th century. The prominent lawyer Christian Ludvig David created the collection in 1948 to share his passion with the public. However, the collection is to this day still growing.

If you want to experience incredible art and cultural history, you should visit The David Collection, which is placed on the outskirts of Frederiksstad. The short walk to the museum also gives you the opportunity to admire the beautiful architecture that characterizes the area. (www.davidmus.dk)

18.00 PM – Restaurant Palægade

If you have worked up an appetite by now, you could drop by Restaurant Palægade. Owned by the same owners as the Michelin starred Formel B, Restaurant Palægade offers a traditional Danish dinner influenced to French cuisine. Here the dishes are made with respect for tradition, although you will get the benefits of the contemporary Nordic cuisine's strong focus on local ingredients. Restaurant Palægade also offers a great lunch. (www.palaegade.dk)

Alhambra – museum for humour and satire exhibits the humorous version of the history of the Danes from 1849 until today. The exhibition tells the story of political satire and freedom of speech, centred around the Danish theatre genre "revy", sketch shows and comedians, famous theatres and the brightest stars in the history of Danish theatre.

Alhambra focuses on humorous performance art in all its various forms, ranging from the jester to the special Danish theatre genre "revy" and the modern stand-up comedian – and it tells the story of entertainment in Denmark through photographs, posters, costumes, videos and recordings. It is also possible for visitors to try on some original theatre costumes, wigs and makeup and give it their best on stage.

During summertime, guests can visit the garden in front of the museum, where dances, concerts and performances can often be enjoyed. For more information see the museum's website.

www.amalienborg.dk

Amalienborg offers two royal experiences that allow you to get close to Danish royal history of the last 250 years.

In Christian VIII's Palace the museum offers you an insight into royal life of the past and present. You can see the private chambers of former kings and queens, and each of the rooms reflects the modern taste of the period and the different personalities. The rooms also tell the story of the changing monarchy through the years. A small exhibit on the monarchy of the 21st century lets you explore what it means to be royal today.

The visit includes the magnificent main floor, the piano nobile, with its royal reception rooms which are still in use by the royal family. The highlight is a group of spectacular gilt bronze sculptures by Bertel Thorvaldsen (1770-1844).

In Christian VII's Palace you can join a guided tour and walk in the footsteps of the royal guests, and see the magnificent rooms where the New Year banquet and other official festivities are held.

Danish "hygge" and authentic working class history for the entire family. Explore daily life of working-class families throughout the past 150 years. Trace the history of the Danish Labour Movement in this authentic building from 1879, located in the centre of Copenhagen. Step into the backyard where the laundry hangs from the clothes lines, and let yourself be guided through small flats, steep staircases, outdoor latrines and the beautiful assembly hall. In the 1950s Coffee Bar you can have a favourite of the time: Chicory coffee and traditional biscuit cake. In the Children's Workers Museum our youngest visitors can try working as delivery boys or girls in the grocer's shop, sort bottles at the brewery, or use a typewriter in the union office. They can also dress up in a sailor's suit, dance at the dance school, play in a 1930s flat, or visit the pawnbroker and see if they can get a few pennies for an old coat. The Children's Workers Museum is especially suited for children aged around 3-12.

Bakkehuset is a museum of literature, art and culture of the Danish Golden Age. In the historic house you can discover Kamma and Knud Lyne Rahbek's authentically furnished home from the early 19th century. Knud Lyne Rahbek was an editor of periodicals, a professor of literature and a theatre manager. Together with his wife Kamma, he created a hub for some of the prominent authors and literary figures of the Danish Golden Age, including people such as Hans Christian Andersen, Adam Oehlenschläger and Hans Christian Ørsted. The museum is surrounded by a garden in the romantic style. A visit to the garden is a study in Kamma Rahbek's highly specialized approach to botany. In the middle of the beautiful garden you find a modern orangery with a museum café. The culinary orangery serves lunch, coffee and tea in the summer season and it is the perfect spot for a break.

Bishop's Portrait

An exhibition of painted portraits of Danish bishops.

The young Danish artist Frantz Nicolaus Klindt Nielsen has painted the new official portrait of Copenhagen's bishop. It is a symbol-saturated and history-filled portrait in its very own form, which is exhibited for the first time. Along with the new painting other portraits, painted by older artists such as J. V. Gertner and Torbjørn Olsen and some more recent painted by Thomas Kluge and Mikael Melbye, also appear.

On a visit to the Cathedral Museum you have the opportunity to get to the church's gallery and look out over C.F. Hansen's magnificent church. In the church one can also walk among Bertel Thorvaldsen's

Throughout 2019, Cisternerne invites curious explorers to venture into the dark future. The Danish artist collective SUPERFLEX has reshaped and flooded the former water reservoir of the capital, now functioning as an underground art hall. With sci-fi elements SUPERFLEX creates a surreal yet plausible scenario where climate change has drastically altered society. The old water reservoir is located in the green heart of Copenhagen, Frederiksberg. For many years the subterranean chambers were forgotten, but today, Cisternerne is an exhibition space for contemporary art with one annual site-specific art experience. The humidity in the underground space is close to 100%, sounds reverberate for up to 17 seconds and dripstones protrude from the ceiling. KØS is Denmark's museum dedicated to art in public spaces. Being the country's only museum specialising in the kind of art familiar to all – from our shared urban spaces, hospitals, castles, churches, and other public areas – gives KØS a unique feel.

Just as a museum of architecture does not collect finished buildings, KØS does not collect finished works of art – those belong in the public sphere. Instead, the museum collection comprise more than 19,000 drawings, models, and other preliminary works for these unique works of art

A succession of special exhibitions provides unique insights into the special processes and problems associated with creating art for the public space. In addition to sketches, drawings, and models, these exhibitions often feature photographs, film footage, and correspondences that shed light on the artists' interplay with architects, urban planners, and the people who will come into daily contact with their work. They also provide insights into the discussions – many of them heated – that arise when art enters the public space where we cannot avoid it.

Medical Museion

Bredgade 62, 1260 København K

+45 35 32 38 00

www.museion.ku.dk

A must-see museum located in the historic Royal Academy of Surgeons, dating from 1787. Medical students once attended anatomy lectures in the magnificent neoclassical auditorium. Today, exhibitions take you on a journey through the world of medicine, from historical understandings of the body to current challenges in public health. Medical Museion is for everybody curious about human bodies and minds – how they have been studied and treated from Antiquity to our age of genes.

Exhibitions

"Mind the Gut" examines how brains and bowels are linked, focusing on complex relationships between minds and guts through a surprising blend of science, art and history.

"The Body Collected" presents the raw material of medical science from historic cadavers to DNA. Experience the history of how medicine studies the body - from skeletons and organs through to cells and genes.

Take an art break in central Malmö! Moderna Museet Malmö is a small, inviting museum in a former power station from 1901 with an orange extension that is an architectural exclamation mark in the city. We have something for everyone – from art lovers to beginners. In our beautiful premises you will find high quality exhibitions of the finest Swedish and international contemporary art along with alternating exhibitions of selected works from Moderna Museet's own rich collection. This year we will feature exhibitions with Andy Warhol, Louise Bourgeois and Carl Fredrik Reuterswärd among others. Our museum hosts are happy to assist you throughout the building and discuss questions raised by the art. We regularly organise events and activities for adults and children. The all-orange foyer has a small museum shop, and in our cafe you can enjoy lunch or fika from Bröd och Vänner.

On the Brink of War

Travel 100 years into the past, to a time when world war raged around Denmark. Explore the many surprising stories in the exhibition and immerse yourself in an era where Denmark is on the brink of war. Denmark must fight for its neutrality and avoid being drawn into the war. It is a time of trench digging, mine laying and humanitarian efforts. The Danish welfare state is born as politicians intervene to keep the people united, while profiteers make a fortune off the war.

Listen to English, German or Danish voices in the exhibition. All texts are printed in these three languages.

The Summer hermitage was built by one of the most famous Scandinavian kings, Christian IV, in the early 17th century. It quickly became his favourite residence. Today, many of the rooms are preserved as they were during the reign of Christian IV, and you can experience the impressive possessions of the king and his descendants. Among the main attractions are the Great Hall with the coronation thrones and three life-size silver lions standing guard. The king's coronation throne is made of narwhale tusk, while the queen's is of silver. The tapestries on the walls commemorate battles between Denmark and Sweden. Rosenborg also houses an exquisite collection of Flora Danica. The invaluable crowns of the Danish royals and the crown jewels are kept in underground vaults. The crown jewels primarily consist of four garnitures: a brilliant set, a ruby/pearl set, a rose-cut diamond set and an emerald set – the emeralds being among the world's finest.

On the north coast of Zealand, you find a unique museum of a Danish artist that combines sculpture, architecture and nature. It is surrounded by a statue park with 14 sculptures raised against the sky with a backdrop of heath and coastline.

The talented Danish artist Rudolph Tegner (1873-1950) fought, in the shadows of naturalism, to find an expression that would move the viewer and take sculpture to a new level. The heritage of Auguste Rodin and Michelangelo is obvious in his early years. He took his art to monumental levels, and he worked both in Denmark and in France.

The museum from 1938 points toward modernism and is built in concrete. The inside holds more than 250 of the artist's works in plaster, clay, marble and bronze. After his death in 1950 Tegner's body was buried beneath the floor of the museum's 11-meter high main hall. The Museum has guided tours almost every Sunday at 2 pm and activities such as concerts, clay workshops, yoga etc. See rudolph-tegner.dk for more info

Museum for Danish humourist, cartoonist and painter Robert Storm Petersen (Storm P.) and for humour and satire in art. Storm P. (1882-1949) was an omnipresent humorous force in the shaping of Danish humour in the 20th Century. His numerous humoristic portrayals of everyday life have made him part of Danish cultural heritage and identity. The museum presents an outstanding Danish artist who, through his art, remains relevant to this day and not only as an image of his time. A reminder that humour and satire is an art form that can be timeless and capable of moving and entertaining generations upon generations of audiences.

In addition to presenting the life and works of Storm P., the museum shows alternating special exhibitions seeking to provide angles on art, comics and popular culture from the perspective of humour and satire as well as embracing and celebrating the rich tradition of the art of popular drawing and graphic art in general.

The exhibition "Storm P. and America" (from May 5) takes you 100 years back in time – to 1919 when Storm P. travelled to New York with the dream of "making it over there". He did not succeed, but the endeavour became a defining experience. The exhibition invites you on a fascinating adventure from enthusiastic boys' dreams and professional ambitions through frustration and despair to new insights. A strong underlying theme is the many cultural differences between Europe and the US at the time.

From Philipsen to Salto – the Collection of Danish Early Modern Art revisited

Visitors to this exhibition can experience and revisit a selection of early modern Danish art that has been collected mainly by the museum founder C. L. David himself. Some of the works of art have never been displayed before. The artists include classical works by Vilhelm Hammershøi, J. F. Willumsen, Theodor Philipsen, Thorvald Bindesbøll, P. S. Krøyer, L. A. Ring, Poul S. Christiansen, Julius Paulsen, Niels Hansen Jakobsen, Albert Gottschalk, Edvard Weie, and the "Funen painters" Peter Hansen and Johannes Larsen. More radical artists represented with their sculptures are Axel Salto, Svend Rathsack, and the French-Danish artist Jean Gauguin. Sculptures, especially smaller ones, are found in abundance in the collection, probably due to the early influence of Agnes Lunn, his sculptor god-mother.

Note that the paintings by Vilhelm Hammershøi will only be part of the exhibition until the end of 2019, after which most of them will be lent to exhibitions in Japan.

Courage, humour and love

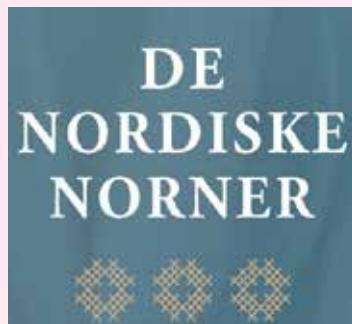

With the new, permanent exhibition "Courage, humour and love – Karen Blixen's life and work", the museum is opening an entirely new chapter in its presentation of Karen Blixen. The exhibition relates the vibrant tale of her superb literary works and dramatic life.

The museum has reconceived its entire presentation, so that it is brimming with the joy of storytelling. Her seven world-famous works are displayed in their original editions and introduced in the most beautiful way. Placards, photos, new documentary films, historic sound recordings, and graphics invite everyone to identify with the magnificent universe of Karen Blixen – from dyed-in-the-wool Blixen fans to school students and casual tourists.

Karen Blixen
17 May – 29 December 2019

At this exhibition, The Karen Blixen Museum will be celebrating three iconic Nordic authors, Selma Lagerlöf, Sigrid Undset and Karen

Blixen, who, like the mythical Norns, intertwine the fates of their characters with love, devilry, and sin. Amidst the clotheslines and old wooden beams beneath the sloping roof of the spacious 18th-century drying loft, scenographer and costume designer Maja Ravn has created an atmospheric exhibition in which nature's erotic forces are let loose and the devil confronts powerful women.

Thorvaldsens Museum is dedicated to the world-famous sculptor Bertel Thorvaldsen, and it houses his sculptures and personal collection of art. Thorvaldsens Museum was the first museum to be built in Denmark. It was paid by the people of Copenhagen to house Bertel Thorvaldsen's art and private collection and was designed by his good friend Bindesbøl.

It was finished in 1848, four years after Bertel Thorvaldsen's death. He is buried in the courtyard, surrounded by all his art.

In this beautiful neoclassical museum, you can enjoy Thorvaldsen's sculptures, in breath-taking colourful surroundings. On the first floor it is possible to see his personal collection of bespoke paintings from the Danish Golden Age era, as well as his antique collection.

VILLUM Window Collection is a small museum that documents the history and development of the window. The museum is named after civil engineer Villum Kann Rasmussen, who founded the VKR Group in 1941 and in the following year invented the VELUX skylight.

VILLUM Window Collection presents the importance of the window for people's access to light, air and view through a three-dimensional and sensory exhibition.

A six-metre-long timeline conveys the history and development of windows and glass from the roof and façade openings to contemporary, climate friendly windows. A time tunnel lets you experience the light coming through historic windows, and an array of different windows and artefacts can be seen, touched, operated and experienced in detail in thematic sections of the museum. One of the main features of the exhibition is a warehouse wall with a large portion of the more than 300 historic windows dating from 17th century that VILLUM Window Collection possesses.

In 2018, VILLUM Window Collection opened the special exhibition

"Wall of Windows from The Brooking" – a unique wall with 68 historical, English windows. The wall is designed by starchitect Rem Koolhaas with windows from architectural historian Charles Brooking's collection of building components.

Welcome to Willumsen's Museum. A colour-saturated art break in the midst of beautiful nature and fantastic architecture. Explore the colourful and imaginative works of Willumsen, join us in the creative workshop, enjoy a cup of hot cocoa in the café – or bring it along for a stroll in the park.

"Willumsen's World": In 1891 Willumsen's simple, symbolic portrayal of his pregnant wife in the etching "Fertility" outraged the Danish art audience, who nevertheless stood in line to see the scandalous work. Willumsen has divided opinions with his visually brash and often flamboyant figurative art ever since.

"Time and again": One of Denmark's great sculptors, Jørgen Haugen Sørensen, is invited to engage in dialogue with Willumsen's monumental work "The Great Relief" as well as a selection of the artist's main works. Life, death, love and suffering are the main focus of the exhibition's works.
